This public document contains an extract from REINVENT's violence monitoring tool. The REINVENT programme maintains an extensive database of security incidents recorded across Kenya, grouped into six categories: crime, public disorder, violent extremism, sexual and gender-based violence, mob retribution and intercommunal violence. In addition, the tool monitors law enforcement activity. Depending on the availability of the data, the tool considers the target of the violence, the use of weapons, casualty figures, the actors involved and the motives. Emerging trends in both time and space are identified using graphs and maps alongside analysis
